

I really appreciate for reading my letter. I wish to join your writer's community because I found myself in need for additional remote job. In other words I need to write more and more. Paid job would give me more motivation in sharpening my skills.

At the moment I work for financial news platform covering articles about trading, blockchain and cryptocurrency. However, I wish to expand my experience and pick more themes to write about.

It is always exciting to figure out the new topic theme, look for information about that, make an attractive title, got through editing and shortening procedure and finally publishing it. I like to speak about something which nobody had spoken before.

I hate to lose, I can not sit in one place a long time, I can not stay without work for a long time. After graduation, my reading preferences changed from fiction to technical journals, manuals, and workbooks, because I started to code and write applications. Which I find a very useful tool, especially in journalism, when you need to find something interesting and deeply hidden.

I collect the most useful skills such as creative writing and SEO, programming and ethical hacking, social engineering and data analysis, health education and language teaching, which will make a good journalist, unleash my internal creativity mixed with almost military discipline and help me survive even zombie apocalypses. But good is not enough for me, I wish to be at least excellent or perfect. And I am pretty sure, that you might help me do that, through given challenges, hard work, and collaborations with the best experts in their area.
